STAGECOACH • 1965

Prologue

This book is opened by eager hands, and these pages are turned by young hearts. . . . We take a moment to recall . . . to think . . . to appreciate life and traditions at St. Mary's and now to reveal the search for knowledge, security, and our inner selves. We turn every page slowly, sometimes stopping, but then moving on . . . touching upon the shadows of strength and depth, and gazing upon the richness of gold, symbolizing time and tradition. Our hearts, once filled with wonder, amazement, and challenge—now burst with reward, success, and pride.

Our best loved tradition . . .

In the stillness of our chapel, our best loved tradition, we find a special place, a solitude in which lies the very core of St. Mary's. Here we quietly sit, gazing silently at the flickering candles' light as it casts long shadows, reflecting the intangible aspects of life. Looking around us, we catch glimpses of bowed heads, folded hands, and thoughtful stares. A tear is quickly brushed aside, lest it fall and burst into tiny droplets, breaking the spell of our wonder and of our world—a tear symbolizing newly found joy or hidden gratitude; a tear standing for sadness, relief, or maybe just a heart's release that we failed to recognize before now. We rise . . . slowly . . . and walk out—ready to resume our place at St. Mary's; sunlight meets our eyes, and we blink to ease the suddenness of reality. We forget momentarily the well of emotion inside us, pushing it aside until another time, and replacing its effects with a smile and the urgency of our filled obligations. . . .

St. Mary's unfolds itself to us on opening day. The old girls frantically dash up and down stairs, across the campus walks, in and out of rooms—and within a few hours, it is hard to realize one ever left St. Mary's three months before. The peals of laughter almost vibrate the buildings themselves, and yes . . . it is good to be back again. This wild and frantic spectacle is tempered by another phase of that first day as we watch the new girls walk excitedly, yet hesitantly, up the steps of Smedes. Within minutes, however, the doubt is erased, and a warm and cordial greeting lights a glow to each new face. Somehow we feel they are glad to be here, too. Another reassurance is present when we meet our counselors who are throughout the year our guides to life here, our example to follow, and most important, our unforgettable friends. Tradition in the form of the New Girl-Old Girl Tea provides our first opportunity for meeting the faculty and for establishing a special friendship with our Big Sisters. From the first hello, the year begins, and soon each of us settles to a routine of our own. It is not long before we wonder how we manage to fit ourselves into so demanding a day—but finally we lose ourselves in our work, in newly acquired interests, in new responsibilities, and in old traditions. We learn to give of ourselves in countless ways, and in serving, we learn to appreciate the results of our efforts.

And enrich us through the years . . .

The Circle - Beacon Christmas Party is one of the tangible representations of the two honorary societies of St. Mary's. Both organizations work together to give the entire student body a special spirit of Christmas at St. Mary's. More important than this aspect, they offer an opportunity for us to share equal excitement and to radiate an awakening glow to the spirit of tradition, for here we are gathered—not as individuals, but as a corporate body.

Not only do special functions at which outstanding girls marshal in beautiful, white, traditional dresses, allow us to be together, but also in chapel and assembly, we share a personal closeness and understanding. There is a distinctive quality represented when we are together—when we may look around us and possess the miraculous sensation of security and of warm responsiveness to each other. We experience again the fortitude of security in our class functions, our club participation, and our hall contributions. We release ourselves in an array of activity and sometimes through our activeness, we lose personal touch with ourselves. In our perseverance, our constancy, and our firmness, we drift almost to a degree of inadequacy and dejection, but to shield our strength of purpose, we probe into the center of our being and search for a warm response, so rich, so restoring, so compensating. . . .

A time to stop . . . to regret . . . to build again. We learn by mistake, and we falter through thoughtlessness. Through the shadows come hearts yearning to understand, to comfort, and to place again. Often for the first time, we realize the depth and sincerity of our friends, and even in the stillness of solitude we are not alone. A masterpiece of strength stands before us, and with unbelief we examine ourselves to find the profundity of being. We acknowledge the integrity and concern of our leaders, and we accept our apprehensions as a part of developing. Though we are sometimes reluctant to accept ourselves completely, we grasp the sureness and the strength which lies within us, and now with positiveness we meet challenge after challenge.

We turn from ourselves to view a larger scope—that of St. Mary's. We perceive with wonder this sometimes perplexing side of life here. Yet we know in order to understand ourselves and others, we must allow for disillusion. For this is life—not to be tossed carelessly, but to be handled with conscientiousness. In this way we build, we cultivate, and we preserve. We follow with fresh awareness, and we lead with added foresight. A light of hope brightens our path and reassuring hands guide the way. We are proud of this unity which has given us strength, this love which has allowed for us understanding, and this Honor which has built for us character.

A realization of the essence of St. Mary's . . .

And the value of her friend- ships

From the depth of great lessons, we learn to respect and appreciate a mandatory basis for happiness, not only at St. Mary's, but for life in society—a framework which culminates our personality—friendship. In responding to the wholeness of friendship, we insert a depth to tradition, making it meaningful to us and invaluable to the legacy of St. Mary's. Traditions at St. Mary's manifest themselves in simplicity. We would not dream of passing on Hillsboro Street without acknowledging the kicking post. A quick trip to the Little Store, the anticipation of hall parties, the birthdays always remembered in the dining hall, and many other occasions become standard traditions for St. Mary's and at the same time a part of us as individuals. Familiar tradition reveals itself on a Saturday night when we run to sign in and finally when we congregate in one room for a reminiscence of the night's events. These are the things that repeat themselves, yet with a variety of meaning. We momentarily forget our books; a new kind of freedom becomes ours—and we acknowledge the independence of our growing maturity and individuality.

We are the girls who fill these halls—with talking and laughing and friendliness. We have imbued into the walls themselves a kind of life which throughout the years has grown to symbolize our movement and into which we have instilled our personalities. We have unconsciously filled an empty space within us, and with a surge of unexpected awareness, we know we have found our place here—a place all our own which has developed and maintained itself while we hurried from the realization of our success. We smile now as we think back on it all, recalling the times when we felt crushing disappointment and the times most dear to us. We can relate many evidences of our happiness, coming to us insignificantly and with our deserving efforts; yet happiness touching every heart and always to be remembered.

"And gladly would he learn, and gladly teach."—Chaucer

Acting as chairman of the English Department is only a small part of Mr. Tate's life at St. Mary's. During the eight years in which he has taught English courses to both the high school and college departments, Mr. Tate has shown a genuine interest which draws students to call upon him for countless reasons. Not only can one count on him to know "the latest" in literary circles, but also where one should go in New York after the play, or what the current feeling is concerning civil rights in Mississippi, his home state. The annual Circle-Beacon Christmas party would not be the same without Mr. Tate as Santa to read "The Night before Christmas." It is during spring break that Mr. and Mrs. Tate undertake to chaperone a group of St. Mary's girls to New York. To the Seniors, Mr. Tate probably holds a special place in helping answer the eternal questions of "What am I doing?" and "Where am I going?" In gratitude for his contribution in fostering a stimulating academic atmosphere on campus and to his untiring interest in the student of St. Mary's this STAGECOACH is dedicated.

Administration and Faculty

RICHARD G. STONE
President

A.B., L.H.D., Western Maryland College; Ph.D., The Johns Hopkins University.

The STAGECOACH presents to all of us a record of the year that has passed. I hope that it will always remind you of your St. Mary's days and the many friends each of you have made. It is my wish that your life has been enriched by your experiences here and that your future contributions to society will be greater because you have been a St. Mary's girl.

Richard G. Stone

MISS EDITH RICHARDSON

Dean of Students

B.A., Wellesley College.

Helping each of us to find our special place at St. Mary's, Miss Edith Anne Richardson, our dean, gives of herself daily both to the girls and to the faculty. Through her warm personality and sincere devotion to the students, Miss R. has made her place in the heart of every one at St. Mary's. The little light in her office that often burns into the early morning hours gives us reassurance—that feeling that Miss R. is always there and willing to council, to advise, and above all, to understand.

DR. MOULTRIE GUERRY

Chaplain

B.A., University of the South; B.D., D.D., Virginia Theological Seminary.

Friendship, devotion, and sincerity mean Dr. Moultrie Guerry to everyone at St. Mary's. Surrounded by a radiant glow, he moves about the campus and gently takes each of us into his heart. During the weekly chapel services, in his classroom, and each Sunday our Chaplain, Dr. Guerry, leads, teaches, and guides us through our spiritual lives. He is all of this and yet more—more because Dr. Guerry has given his love to all at St. Mary's.

Activities

Leadership Borne

By Student Government
Officers
1964 to 1965

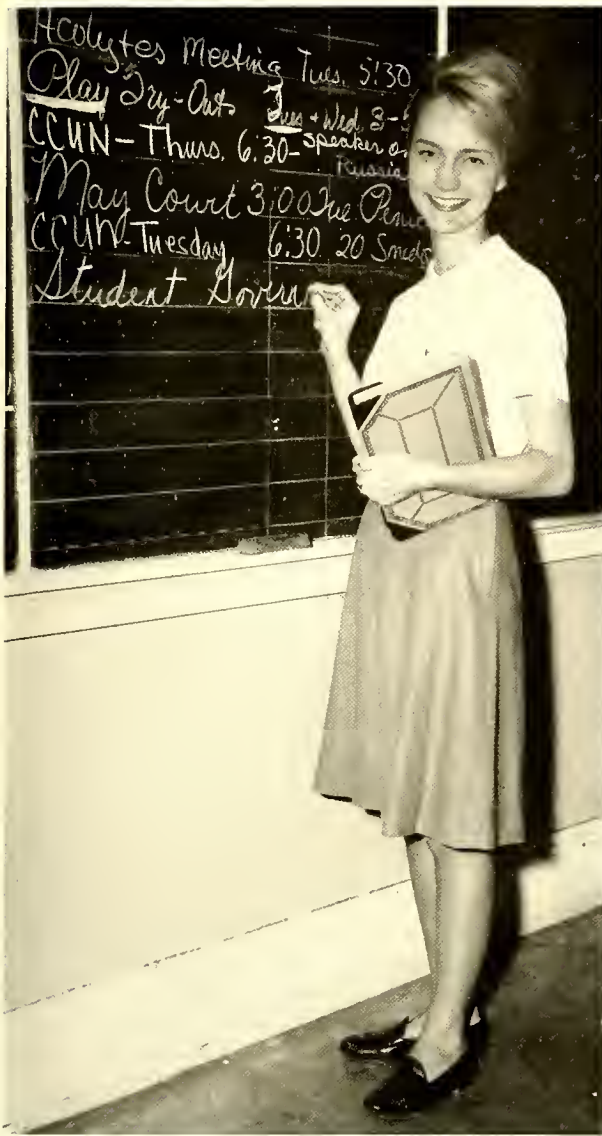

Truly symbolizing the Student Government Association is a simple, black notebook. Given at least one book outlining her duties, a student government officer must constantly refer to it for guidance. These notebooks contain the essence of student representation. However, the book alone is insufficient. To meet the responsibilities of Student Government work, an officer must in the end depend on herself. Heading the Student Government Association is its president, Dianne Ricks. She must, along with her officers, serve as a link between the faculty and student body and between the faculty and administration. Assisting Dianne is Harriet Gilliam, Vice President. One of the Vice President's many responsibilities is to plan and execute orientation week. Mike Hill, as Secretary, keeps records for Honor Board, Student Government meetings, and for the Treasury. Duties of Michelle Bratton, President of Day Students, are to keep the Day Students informed of Student Government activities and to serve on Hall Council and the Legislative Body. Pammy Holcomb's most important responsibilities as Chairman of Hall Council are to select hall counselors and to serve as chairman of the Disciplinary Committee, Minor Offense Committee, and Hall Council. As Secretary of Hall Council, Mary Ravenel must keep an accurate account of points accumulated by girls and issue campuses whenever necessary. These officers work to benefit the entire study body which they represent.

Leadership Assumed by Student Legislators

Legislative Body

Composed of faculty members and student representatives from each class, the Legislative Body is the third branch of Student Government. With its three committees, the Legislative Body studies and makes necessary changes in the school constitution each year and considers and votes on student proposals to change or modify certain regulations. This year a petition for a reading day before exams was submitted to and passed by the Body. Established in 1938, the purpose of this branch of Student Government is to promote better relations between students and faculty and to contribute to the feeling that Student Government is the responsibility of every member at St. Mary's.

"The greatest trust between man and man is the trust of giving counsel."—Francis Bacon

Hall Council

An important part of Student Government, the Hall Council, is composed of two counselors from each resident hall and three Day Student counselors. Through two branches, the Disciplinary Committee and the Minor Offence Committee, the Hall Council has authority over all student regulations and behavior not directly dealt with by the Honor Council. The counselors are chosen for the qualities of dependability, character, understanding, and patience. They are important in helping the new girls adjust to St.

Mary's life and in acting as advisors to problems the girls face during the year. The Hall Council as a tradition itself holds its own traditions. The counselors return to St. Mary's a week early in the fall to prepare for the arrival of the girls and to welcome each one individually. In addition, they decorate the halls and make name tags to put on each door. It is also a tradition that they give the girls on their hall a party in the fall to welcome them and at Christmas.

Leadership and Guidance

"You guessed it—Shorts are extended to 5 o'clock!" Pammy Holcombe announces to the counselors.

Jackie Myers, Assembly Chairman.

Assembly Chairman

As Assembly Chairman, Jackie Myers is responsible for planning and presiding over assemblies and for inviting guest speakers to visit St. Mary's. With the help of her advisor, Mrs. Fish, she has given much time in choosing an interesting variety of programs. Among those presented by different groups at St. Mary's are the Senior class annual fashion show, the Cold Cuts' singing, and programs of various clubs such as the C.C.U.N.'s account of the U. N. mock assembly at Chapel Hill and the Dramatics Club production of "The Sandbox." In addition, members of the faculty and outstanding people in North Carolina have participated in assembly this year. Sharon Finch, Miss North Carolina (a St. Mary's graduate), spoke about her rôle as Miss North Carolina. Others included Senator Voit Gilmore, who spoke on travel services; Lydia Fish, who played the guitar; and Phil Ellis, who read Uncle Remus stories.

Anne Straight, Fire Captain

Fire Captain

Flashlights . . . London Fogs . . . towels . . . sturdy shoes . . . have everything for the fire drill? Anne Straight is responsible for this commotion. As St. Mary's Fire Captain, it is her duty to carry out orderly fire drills and to see that everyone leaves the halls properly and quickly. Working with the Raleigh City Fire Department, Anne starts the alarm and, decked in raincoat and firehat, watches the spectacle of calm girls emerging from the various dormitories. After everyone is finally outside, she sounds the alarm again so that students may return into the buildings.

Dance Marshals

Everyone danced to the music of "The Ascots" in the school gymnasium while the dance marshals hosted for the occasion.

Elected by their respective classes, the Dance Marshals are responsible for deciding what social functions will be provided for their classes. If a dance is decided upon, the girls select the theme, the band, and then the decorations for the event.

Mary Jo Quinerly, Louise Wilson Clark, Jacquelyn Lorene Myers, Kathleen Johnson Hall, Elsie Dunn Hines, Olivia Lamb Gilliam.

Marshals

The Marshals are elected from the rising senior class in the late spring of each year. Selected for their poise, charm, and over-all attractiveness, they keep roll in assembly and usher at Chapel services and concerts. They also lead the Sophomores and Seniors at graduation, present flowers to singers at concerts and usher at the Old-Girl New-Girl reception. In addition, this year they marshaled at May Day. According to tradition, when the new marshals take over two weeks before the end of school, they wear white dresses handed down to them from the preceding marshals. At all functions afterward, except for Chapel services, they wear their traditional long white dresses. At Graduation, the head Marshal wears a white sash, and the other Marshals wear blue sashes. A beautiful tradition is the dropping of a handkerchief in front of Smedes by the Chief Marshal to end the school year.

The Order of The Circle

The most respected organization at St. Mary's, the Order of the Circle, endeavors to distinguish outstanding students in the college department. Members include those girls who strive to use their influence to inact school spirit and good relations between students and faculty. Established in 1938, the Circle is a secret society, holding its ceremonies and meetings in absolute secrecy. There are many traditions connected with the Circle: the light blue ring worn underneath the St. Mary's ring, the circle stone outside of Holt, the sale of mugs, and the midnight walks behind the guiding light of the torch. The walks are ended in front of Smedes by completing a circle thus symbolizing their name. As the Circle is symbolic of unity, it is the duty of each member, through her character, individuality, dependability, and fellowship to bring together and unify every branch of life at St. Mary's.

The Beacon

Organized by Miss Elizabeth Bason in 1948, the Beacon has become an established high school tradition at St. Mary's. It's main purpose is to promote school spirit, loyalties, and co-operation among the underclassmen. Girls are selected for Beacon membership because of their qualities of leadership, scholarship, and participation in extracurricular activities. There are several traditions associated with this society; the lantern, the walk around campus beginning at the Chapel and terminating on the steps of Smedes, and the Beacon pin. To raise money this year, the members sold St. Mary's decals, post cards, and popcorn. In addition, for their service project, the girls made Easter baskets for the children in the Wake County Memorial Hospital.

Paula Simpson, Sandi Beck, and Jannet Bowers, enthusiastic Beaconites, advertise popcorn for sell.

The Stagecoach

Started in 1876, St. Mary's annual was originally a combination of yearbook and literary magazine called the "Muse." In 1925, the name was changed to STAGECOACH, and it gradually became only a yearbook. This year, the staff has worked hard taking pictures, organizing the layout, selling advertisements, and writing the copy, to meet the deadline.

Belles

St. Mary's newspaper, the Belles, is published thirteen times during the school year. The editor, elected by the student body, chooses her staff editors, photographer, head typist, and circulation manager; in the fall, try-outs are held for the other staff members. This year, the Belles has had a wide selection of articles on all phases of life at St. Mary's. Articles have appeared featuring various school clubs and organizations, class and Student Government officers, athletics, Assembly programs, concerts, and special chapel services. There have also been articles on special events such as the Penick party, the Freshman-Sophomore dance, and holiday plans. Clever photographs and cute art work illustrate many of the articles that appear in the Belles.

The written word is the tie that binds men, nations, and ideas. Without expression, the world would be nothing. Students at St. Mary's find their means of expression and communication in The Muse. Issued twice a year, this student magazine contains poetry and prose that express the feelings of students in a changing world.

Handbook Committee

The Handbook Committee is responsible for editing the traditional handbook at St. Mary's. Selected by student vote, the editor chooses the staff with which she would like to work. This official booklet of the Student Government Association contains the rules, regulations, and activities which are a vital part of the functioning of the school. Being brought up to date according to rule changes, the committee works with the Dean, the heads of the departments, the Student Government officials, and the Registrar to include all aspects of life at St. Mary's. This year several changes have been made, including the grading system. An academic average of 70 rather than 65 is required for a student to pass. Each student receives her handbook during the summer, and soon after the beginning of the academic year all girls are tested on its material.

Dramatics Club

Under the direction of Mrs. Stamey, the Dramatics Club is composed of girls who are interested in acting and working back stage in school productions. In addition to selecting the most suitable play for production at St. Mary's, the club sponsors workshops for instruction in make-up, costuming, and lighting. This year the girls presented the melodrama, "Only an Orphan Girl" first semester, and "Joan of Lorraine" for the traditional play during Commencement week. Members of the Dramatics Club also entertained the student body with a presentation of "Spoon River Anthology" in assembly.

Young Democrats Club

Girls interested in contributing their efforts to the Democratic party are eager to participate in a club designed to attract future voters and to organize their efforts into effective work. Election year provided ample opportunity for members to help their party. In the fall the YDC served at the Democratic Headquarters in Raleigh converting paper cartons into money containers to use at a rally for Johnson held at the William Neal Reynolds Coliseum. There the Young Democrats became "Johnson girls" and collected contributions for the Presidential campaign. The club also has as its purpose to increase its members' knowledge of and interest in politics and current national affairs.

Young Republicans Club

With the addition of many members and a revival of enthusiasm and interest, the Young Republicans Club has been very active this year. Attention was focused on the 1964 Presidential election in which the girls worked hard to promote their candidate, Barry Goldwater. They spent many hours both at the Republican Headquarters in Raleigh and at the Goldwater booth on the State Fair grounds. The members also staged a rally on campus to advance Goldwater's financial and moral support. Even after his disappointing defeat, St. Mary's supporters still found time to write him a letter expressing their regret and stating their optimism for the future. They were most delighted upon receiving his personal replies and stood firm in their belief that Barry will rate in '68.

Mary Olive Lyle, Secretary-Treasurer; Amy Hardy, President; Debbie Ellis, Vice President; supported "Goldwater in '64"!

Granddaughters' Club Proud of Heritage

Composed of girls whose mothers or grandmothers attended St. Mary's, the Granddaughters' Club is directed by the Alumnae Secretary. Members earn money by selling address books and present the school with a gift at the end of the year. They are also in charge of Alumni Day.

Y.W.C.A.

Girls at St. Mary's interested in civic activities find much reward in the Young Women's Christian Association. This year their worthwhile projects on campus have included distributing pledge cards for Chapel offerings, sponsoring the sale of St. Mary's charms, and making crosses for Palm Sunday. The club has also centered activities outside the campus. Y.W.C.A. members spent many afternoons at the Methodist Orphanage reading to the children and helping them with their homework. In addition, they gave the Orphans a Christmas party and took them to the Ice Capades. Girls also visited Dix Hill where they talked to the patients, acting as a link between the hospital and the outside world. Moreover, other students took the children from the North Carolina State School for the Blind to the May Day dress rehearsal and organized an old clothes drive for these children.

C.C.U.N.

Striving to create an awareness and appreciation for the United Nations, members of the Collegiate Council on the United Nations discuss world affairs and hold special forums on particular topics. As president, Amy Hardy has planned as interesting variety of programs and has arranged to have speakers on different phases of current events talk to the group. The highlight of this year's work was the club's participation in the mock U.N. Assembly held in Chapel Hill. Representing the delegation from Australia, six C.C.U.N. members made intensive research on the country and its relationship with the United Nations. After the trip, conducting an assembly program, the girls reenacted all that they had learned, and they emphasized the importance of being aware of current world affairs.

Students Active In

Canterbury Club

Students interested in the current position of religion meet at State University on Sunday nights. The Canterbury Club offers girls at St. Mary's the opportunity to discuss the place of religion in today's world. The Club has also heard several outstanding speakers, and attended many interesting and informative conferences.

Jane Knox Grant, Nancy Vernon, Harriet Jeffress, Joan Wickham, Johnsie Haywood, President. Second row: Laura Eutsler, Paula Simpson, Daisy Hall, Ellen-Grey Catto, June Hall.

Altar Guild

St. Mary's Altar Guild is composed of girls who wish to devote some of their time to the care of the Chapel. Members serve on committees to set the hymn books in order, polish the brass and silver, arrange the flowers on the altar, and change the linens and hangings for the various services and different church seasons. The Altar Guild is also responsible for setting up the Communion before the service. By their care and attention to the interior of the Chapel, Altar Guild members feel as if they are taking a more active part in the Chapel services.

Choir

Directed by Mr. Stephen Young, the choir contributes music for the weekly chapel and Sunday services. This year the choir also sang for the carol-singing at Christmas and for the Feast of Lights during Epiphany. Through their music, they add much to the atmosphere of worship in our chapel. Also contributing to the spiritual life at St. Mary's are the Crucifers and Acolytes. The Crucifers take turns carrying the Crucifix each Sunday, and the Acolytes must light the candles for each service. As the chapel is the vital part of life at St. Mary's, these girls have highly rewarding tasks.

Glee Club

Composed of talented St. Mary's singers, the Glee Club is supervised and guided by Miss Geraldine Cate. The members have entertained at several outstanding programs during the year. According to tradition, a Christmas program was given the night before vacation. At this performance, the girls sang a few well-known Christmas carols as well as some unusual religious and folk pieces. They also presented a joint concert in the spring with the East Carolina Men's Club. The other main attraction during the year was the traditional program given at graduation. The girls began the performance with the St. Mary's hymn and continued to sing a variety of music including classical, folk, and popular songs. Members of the Glee Club also serve as hostesses at the receptions which follow concerts given by choral groups from other colleges that visit St. Mary's.

Ensemble

From the Glee Club, girls who are particularly talented are selected to join the Ensemble. Also under the direction of Miss Cate, this group participates in a special program during the Christmas and Graduation concerts. In addition, the Ensemble has entertained other groups and civic organizations in the Raleigh area, including the Raleigh Woman's Club Christmas program and the Rotary Club Christmas luncheon.

Sigma-Mu Tradition

MU

Sigma and Mu, the two intramural athletic teams at St. Mary's instill much school spirit in the students of the school. Each student belongs to one of the two teams. Through the rivalry between the Sigmas and the Mus, excitement and suspense build up during the year. They compete in various sports, including speed ball, basketball, swimming, tennis, pingpong, bridge, soft ball, badminton, archery, and track.

MU cheerleaders and players watch for a victory over the SIGMAS.

Sigma

Points are given to the team winning each tournament, building up to the climax of the year, the annual Letter Club banquet. At this time, a traditional cup is awarded to the team that has gained the most points. The teams also have their cheerleaders which add enthusiasm to the games and boost the ego of players on their team. Sigma-Mu, representing the initials of St. Mary's, binds the girls together and creates a true school spirit.

Cheerleaders

To be eligible for the Letter Club, a girl must have excelled in at least two sports during the year. All athletic events are sponsored by the club beginning with the traditional Old Girl-New Girl party. Before this party, counselors and Letter Club members rush through the halls with a tremendous racket to collect the girls and to tell the new girls whether they are Sigmas or Mus. The girls gather in the gym where they form circles to cheer for their team. This year, cookies and punch were served, and the Cold Cuts entertained. The climax of the year is the annual Spring banquet, usually a picnic. At this time, awards are given to outstanding students, and a plaque is awarded to the team having earned the most points. Good sportsmanship and rewarding competition in all sports are the aims of the Letter Club.

Sea Saints

In the fall of every year, hopeful girls try out for St. Mary's honorary swimming organization. The prospective "Sea Saints" must prove their skill in basic strokes, stunts, and synchronized swimming. Having been chosen, the new members begin hours of exhausting practice to prepare for the traditional water ballet given each year for the student body and public. This year the Sea Saints presented "Manhattan Excursion" in which they portrayed characteristic phases of life in New York. The faculty advisor for the club is Mrs. Gill Barr.

Caperettes

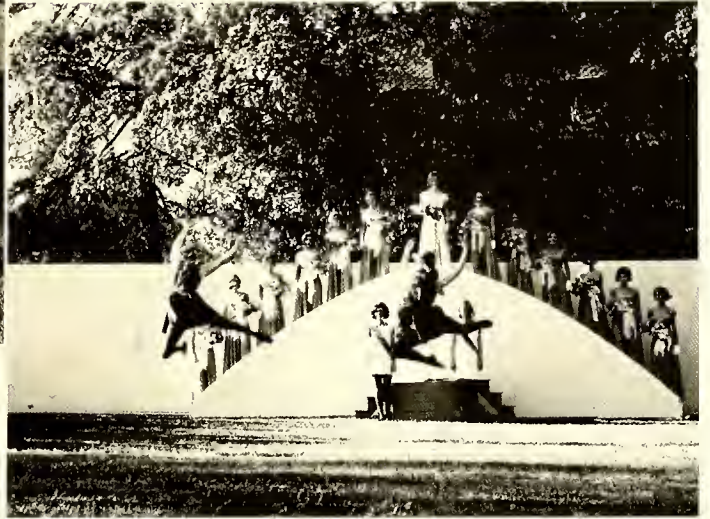

Shuffle-ball-change . . . hop-knee-hop-kick. These are among the terms heard at each Caperette practice. The Caperettes were organized a few years ago by a group of tap dancing students under the direction of Mrs. Doris Bailey. It has since become a favorite group on campus. Members are chosen from students who have shown an interest and ability in tap dancing and precision kicking. At Christmas, the Caperettes presented a program on "the delights of Christmas." At this performance, different girls depicted the parts of Santa Claus, his reindeer, dolls, and other Christmas objects. They also participated as mermaids in May Day.

The Darling Children

Nana and Maids

In Never-Never Land the boys and Wendy meet such strange and wonderful people, the beautiful mermaids of Mermaid Lagoon, the Indian Princess and her Maidens who were always chased by Pirates, and of course, the Crocodiles who were forever after Captain Hook's other hand. They all danced and played together in this land where dreams are born.

I am a Senior—you found me here when you came, and from that first day you were not alone. I carried a candle for you, and then you were able to see . . . dimly at first and finally with a clear eye. I took your arm and guided you . . . you followed timidly; afraid to regret, yet afraid not to try. At last you lost yourself in the traditions and standards of St. Mary's and I looked behind to find you no more. It was then I knew I would no longer lend you with my light, but now I will give you my candle—it is yours for I must go my way . . . no longer to challenge, but to be challenged, no longer to guide, but to find my way alone, no longer to dream, but to live a reality. It is true that I must leave you, but not until I have touched your heart, and then you will not forget me. . . .

The COLD CUTS

Cold Cuts

Chosen on originality of instrument, musical talent, and over-all enthusiasm, girls belonging to the Cold Cuts may be seen performing throughout the Raleigh and Chapel Hill area. Attired in "Clod pants," they sing a variety of songs and play such unusual instruments as the bird cage and washboard. This year the Cold Cuts have played at a number of State and Carolina fraternity houses and at several civic organizations, including the Rotary Club, the Orphanage, the Retired People's Dinner, and the Engineer's Ball. They have also played at the Senior Class banquet, Alumni meeting, Assembly, and other school functions. Through their entertainment and enthusiasm, this group helps to cultivate school spirit among themselves and other members of the student body.

Junior Class

We are on the threshold of a new beginning. Many of us arrived here on a wave of fears and dreams, and were confronted with life for the first time. As we were gently led into the intricacies of our new environment, our fears became challenges; our dreams began to grow. Life at St. Mary's has made us stronger, and now we must express our strength by leading others. Because of the guiding light we obtained from our seniors, we look forward to the coming year as a challenge to try to succeed in the task of helping and inspiring others at St. Mary's . . . so that they, too, may conquer their fears and meet their dreams.

Kinsey Sabiston, President; Charlotte Smith, Vice President; Annie Lee Mobley, Treasurer; Sandy Beck, Secretary.

I am a Sophomore. I can recognize, appreciate, and record my delight in academic achievements and in my growth and development. St. Mary's is an everlasting friendship. It is a select and special relation which is a kind of absolute. I can see the best in my being. Happy thoughts, disappointments, and a multitude of memories crowd my mind. I have tried to take from each day the best it offered, and I have given it the best of my own. I may have effected a skill, or I may have touched a heart . . . the joy that is unacclaimed is mine.

Freshman Class

As a Freshman, I came to St. Mary's full of hopes and anticipation. Gradually, in the confusion, I found order, in the crowd, a familiar face, and from the many students and traditions which had gone before me, I found inspiration. In myself, I found new insights and began to discover the meaning of independence and maturity, and the responsibility that goes with each. But most of all, from what St. Mary's has given me, I began to give of myself to St. Mary's and to set an example for classes and generations of girls yet to be.

These are the halls in which the life of this book has taken place—the halls where friends were made, and lessons and love learned. These halls are empty now with a somber silence, for the end is nearing. The beginning, as we remember, was exciting, maybe a bit frightening, but in any respect an invaluable step toward an undeveloped part of our lives. Now that we have experienced and learned and accepted, we realize that a portion of that undeveloped self has been fulfilled. We have experienced the richness of friendship, the depth of religion, and the quality of life's opportunities. We have also experienced disappointment, disillusion, and frustration, but because we have a broader view of life's winding road, we can cast aside the stones barring our path and proceed to our individual goals with reassured confidence. We have learned from the inexhaustible efforts of our teachers to grasp knowledge and in turn to apply it whenever we can. Aside from the knowledge bound between our book covers, we have learned the lessons of life—starting with the simple ones, and stepping upward as if on a ladder. We have learned the true meaning of greatness, of virtue, and of quality. Finally we have learned that we have only grasped a minute fraction of life's richness itself, and that before us is an infinity of knowledge and experience. Along with experience and learning, we have also accepted. We begin upon our first day at St. Mary's—we accepted the responsibilities which bound us to the Student Government Association and to the Honor System; we accepted the traditional standards and ideals of St. Mary's and sought to make them our own. We have accepted the legacy of the past. At commencement we participate in St. Mary's most beautiful traditions. Each class originates a group of songs and takes its turn singing them on Smedes Hall steps for the annual "step singing." As the little chapel is "our best loved tradition," it is appropriate that here our life at St. Mary's ends. Not only the cap and gown and the diploma, but also the ritual of the Little Sister turning her Big Sister's class ring around signifies the end of one's life at St. Mary's. The white handkerchief dropped by the chief marshal as she faces a semi-circle of the entire college officially brings the year to a finish. Not only have we accepted these legacies, but we have also accepted our academic successes with untold pride, and we have accepted our failures and disappointments with hope for improvement. But far more achieving than these, we have learned to accept others and ourselves with a realization of human kind and the variety of our nature.

epilogue

Years shall pass and traditions shall grow older and richer, and the ideals and standards of St. Mary's will be swept into new hearts and be forever preserved in old ones. We who leave take with us the intangible aspects of lessons in life and the profoundness of knowledge acquired. We take our STAGECOACH with us, and we will watch it be passed to bookshelves and libraries in our homes, always there to remind us of ever-instilled happiness. . . . And many years from now, aged hands shall open this book, and grateful hearts shall turn these pages. . . .

Carry with them

Now as a thousand thoughts and remembrances race through our minds, we suddenly feel an incompatible urge to cling to our security, and to retrace our steps through another year. After a moment of indescribable hesitancy we know that we cannot, for a year at St. Mary's is like a day never to be lived again. For some of us, our life at St. Mary's has just begun like a book with the beginning pages turned. We will come back and walk through these halls gathering along our way, unrevealed experiences. But for others, the symbolic cap and gown signifies a completion and a success. The handkerchief touching softly upon the flagstone walk, carries to every heart a saddened finality and opens to tear-stained eyes new pathways to follow—pathways going in many directions, projecting themselves like spokes from a mighty wheel. Some will travel alone, while others with continued companionship will make their way together. But regardless of our new destiny, we have within us a common experience—that of being a St. Mary's girl and of sharing the events of one year together. New faces will replace the old ones, and new lives will grow to feel and love the spirit of St. Mary's contained in these old stone walls.

a saddened finality . . .
